The Assessment Approach

This report is based on the integrated results of a 4-hour multi-part interview with the leader along with the Individual Style Profile (ISP), Hogan Development Survey (HDS) and Professional History Questionnaire (PHQ) which were completed beforehand.

The multi-part interview included:

- Discussion on past experience, career decisions, transitions, and motivations.
- Two-hour story-based interview, focusing on critical events as a leader, to assess the full range of leadership capabilities and skills that differentiate outstanding executives and will be critical for the future at Evernorth Health Services.
- Two-hour Executive Intelligence (ExI®) assessment, based on an interactive case study approach, to assess in real time how the executive approaches novel business problems and makes critical decisions and their capacity to stretch and grow.
- Discussion regarding self-perception, aspirations, and mobility.

Delivery Lead, Accenture (2004 - 2010)

Summary

Pavan brings a broad technology leadership career spanning over 20 years, spent in healthcare, financial services, telecommunications, consulting, and product organizations. Across his career, he has combined technical expertise with a focus on talent development, capability building, and innovation, and an inclination to challenge traditional delivery models by promoting learning, domain depth, and technology-led transformation. His experience is shaped by an intent to build scalable teams and foster cultures that move organizations beyond execution excellence toward greater strategic contribution and innovation. In his current role at Evernorth Health Services, he leads technology strategy, delivery, Data & AI enablement, stakeholder partnership, and capability development across the USET organization. He is tasked with supporting the GCC's evolution into a strategic innovation and enterprise partner within Evernorth's global healthcare ecosystem.

Driven by Purpose, Results, and Learning, Pavan is motivated by creating meaningful impact, developing people, and building capability that extends beyond immediate delivery outcomes. His leadership reflects a strong orientation toward connecting teams to a broader purpose, helping others understand why the work matters, and creating engagement through trust, empathy, and personal conviction. He is comfortable operating with ambiguity and big-picture ideas, while preferring to inspire ownership and intrinsic motivation rather than relying heavily on structure or hierarchy to drive performance.

As the Evernorth Health Services GCC enters its next phase of growth, Pavan would benefit from sharpening a few areas, namely:

- Strengthening the operating systems behind GCC impact
- Embedding scalable operating discipline
- Creating leadership leverage through clarity, accountability, and delegation
- Navigating organizational dynamics with greater structure and balance

Pavan's next leadership shift lies in balancing empowerment with greater structure, accountability, and execution discipline. Remaining open to challenging long-held assumptions and adapting to new evidence will strengthen his effectiveness and bring greater consistency in his leadership cadence. This is critical to his success in increasingly complex contexts.

Strengths and Opportunities

Key Strengths

Translating technology modernization into organization capability

- » Pavan brings leadership experiences across healthcare, retail, banking, insurance, and technology-driven transformation environments.
- » He has progressed from delivery and engineering leadership roles into senior leadership positions, building a track record of modernizing platforms, strengthening operational discipline, and scaling technology capabilities across Accenture, Blackberry, McKesson, TransUnion, and Evernorth.

Solid business and healthcare context combined with delivery orientation

- » Brings substantial healthcare and payer industry experience gained through most of his career in the U.S. healthcare ecosystem
- » Has an articulated understanding of the criticality of the business and the operational importance of the functions he oversees
- » Fortifies delivery depth through a solid reputation as a techno-functional leader with IT and technology trend awareness, and a blend of technological expertise, business acumen and partnership management
- » Played a key role in standing up capability, scaling talent, hiring leaders, and helping build the Hyderabad organization during its formative stages. For example: Headcount and talent acquisition delivery, 2025 and AI Claims MVP1 delivery, 2026.

Relationship-led collaboration and stakeholder engagement

- » Described as approachable, collaborative, and relationship-oriented, with a demonstrated ability to build trust and create productive partnerships across functions and levels.
- » Leadership impact and style reflects a strength in cultivating alignment and maintaining constructive relationships that support collaboration and change efforts
- » Leverages relationships, underpinned by a strong Learning orientation (as seen on his ISP), to navigate a matrixed environment, build networks, share information, generate insights, drive engagement, with a focus on advancing organizational priorities.

Purpose-led people leadership

- » Pavan's leadership appears anchored in a strong sense of purpose and a genuine investment in people. He has built his impact as a leader who creates engagement through empathy, trust, and personal conviction.
- » He helps teams and colleagues feel connected to both the work and the broader impact of priorities and outcomes. In articulating why outcomes matter he creates commitment beyond immediate delivery goals.
- » Known to be approachable, supportive, and empowering, creating an environment where individuals feel trusted to take ownership while knowing support and aircover are available when challenges arise.
- » His visible investment in wellbeing, development, and community-building contributes to strong engagement and morale, reflecting a strong Purpose drive (as seen on his ISP) and a desire to create meaningful impact through people.

Opportunity Areas

Strengthening the operating systems behind GCC impact

- » Understands the aspiration of a best-in-class GCC and can articulate the shift from delivery support to enterprise capability ownership. However, taking ownership of defined workstreams within a global delivery model, he remains execution-focused and dependent on broader organizational structures for accountability and decision-making.
- » Relies on relationships and stakeholder engagement to drive outcomes, but has yet to consistently translate this into repeatable, scalable operating mechanisms.
- » While trusted relationships enable progress, the next phase of Pavan's leadership needs focus on building scalable systems, leadership leverage, and disciplined execution.

Embedding scalable operating discipline

- » Pavan delivers through personal drive and hands-on involvement, with an opportunity to build more repeatable processes, governance, and team structures.
- » His focus on outcomes can at times outweigh the operating disciplines that sustain them, including delivery cadence, metrics, transparency, and execution rigor.
- » Strengthening delegation, leadership bench strength, and feedback disciplines would increase organizational leverage and free capacity for broader enterprise priorities.
- » His focus on purpose and outcomes (as seen in the ISP) can outpace the scrutiny, structure, and controls needed to scale execution

Creating leadership leverage through clarity, accountability, and delegation

- » There is need for greater clarity through structured communication, timely feedback, and clearer expectations around priorities, success measures, and stakeholder requirements. Can allow relationships to override necessary professional cadence, difficult decisions, and accountability to sustain delivery momentum.
- » Creates space for self-directed ownership and broad outcome alignment; however, a lighter emphasis on delivery details, metrics, and cadence can diffuse accountability, while his last-mile involvement in execution may limit opportunities to build leadership leverage and capacity to focus on broader organizational priorities.
- » Building stronger second-line leaders, clearer accountability, and disciplined coaching and performance routines to reduce dependence on his personal involvement and raise execution standards is advised

Navigating organizational dynamics with greater structure and balance

- » Needs stronger stakeholder management across both U.S. functional leadership and site leadership within the GCC matrix. Needs to drive clearer expectations, alignment, and follow-through.
- » Struggles at times to read the room, listen deeply, and fully recognize organizational and political dynamics, which may limit his ability to build alignment around change initiatives and gain traction for his ideas.
- » Would benefit from more disciplined communication, proactive stakeholder updates, and visible action on feedback received; without sufficient structure, his strong intent and ambitious ideas can at times be perceived as over-commitment relative to delivery.

Executive Intelligence

These scores are based on Executive Intelligence (ExI®) evaluation. Executive Intelligence measures the capacity to address novel and complex business problems, navigate difficult social situations with multiple stakeholders, and adapt, adjust, and learn in novel or ambiguous situations. The assessment is benchmarked against thousands of senior-level executives.

	EMERGING	SOLID	DISTINCTIVE
Critical and Conceptual Thinking Ability to navigate complexity and ambiguity with ease, examine problems broadly, and make fresh connections.				When problem solving, Pavan sought additional information, questioned assumptions, and used data to support views. He weighed longer-term priorities against short-term delivery pressures, although his reasoning remained anchored in familiar experiences and strongly held convictions. He articulates values-led ideas and future possibilities, particularly around people issues, new technology and culture. However, he was less consistent in distilling these into concise conceptual frameworks or translate broad themes into actionable next steps. He also tended to focus on one or a few issues more than taking a complete view of the moving parts. As a result, audiences may at times connect with his intent more readily than be able to 'see' the practical implications of his thinking.
Interpersonal and Social Awareness Ability to read and respond to individual emotions and agenda and effectively navigate complex group or social dynamics.				Pavan demonstrates strong interpersonal intelligence, showing a natural inclination to tap into others' concerns, support/invest in development, and a clear intent to build trust through empathy and support. He consistently framed decisions through their impact on people, culture and individual growth. While he recognizes organizational dynamics, territoriality, resistances to change, and stakeholder agendas, his responses suggest a stronger preference for advocating ideas on their merits than deliberately navigating political realities to build influence and drive decisions.
Self-evaluation and Adjustment (Learning Agility) Ability to listen, seek new information, use of constructive criticism, recognition of personal biases and flaws.				Pavan demonstrates strong conviction around his ideas and aspirations, though he may, in the moment, be slower to critically re-examine his own assumptions when alternative perspectives are offered. He remained anchored to his preferred view despite stakeholder resistance, reflecting a tendency to advocate for change more readily than adapt his approach to gain broader adoption. He will benefit from looking past the merits of his ideas to listen to alternate views, and challenge personal assumptions as rigorously as others' ideas. Further he could intentionally remain open to revising views as new evidence emerges, in order to co-create the best, most, contextually robust solutions.

Individual Style Profile

Pavan is naturally drawn to meaningful ideas, continuous growth, and tangible impact, preferring autonomy, exploration, and personal conviction over rigid structures or hierarchy. He is energized by environments that help people realize their potential, support wellbeing and learning, and connect everyday work to a broader sense of purpose. The dominant aspects of his style are:

Purpose (idealistic, tolerant, balanced)

Has the ability to put things in perspective and sees the big picture. Cares about the overall purpose that underpins work and contributes to a cause, community or shared value. Will work best in organizations that are purpose-driven and have some element of sustainability.

Results (achieving, driven, goal-oriented)

Driven to achieve great things and tends to find success in all tasks. Determined and ambitious and rarely gives up once the mind is set on something. Prefers working in organizations that reward success.

Learning (open-minded, inventive, exploring)

Has a passion for learning and an inquisitive mind. Creative, imaginative and can generate many new ideas and adapt to changing circumstances. Works best in innovative and flexible environments. Likes to be around people who are prepared to take risks.

Enjoyment and Order are his least preferred styles. He is naturally drawn to meaning, possibility, and growth over routine, rules, or convention, often choosing meaningful exploration and impact over spontaneous fun, structure and predictability.

Potential Blindspots

When under stress, bored or distracted, individuals have the potential to bring out behaviours which have the potential to be destructive or “derail” situations or relationships and impact overall leadership and or personal effectiveness. In normal circumstances, these same styles are also likely to be our strengths. A description of Pavan’s potential blind spots which may need to be managed are highlighted below.

The outcome of the Individual Style Profile highlights some potential blind spots for Pavan, emerging through:

- » Results (Most preferred style): Drive for outcomes can at times outpace the operating discipline needed to sustain them, leading him to prioritize progress and impact over the governance, accountability, and execution rigor required for scale.
- » Authority (Over-leveraged drive): Confidence in his judgment and ability to drive change may, at times, reduce openness to challenge, causing him to lean more heavily on personal conviction than on differing perspectives or feedback.
- » Purpose (Highly preferred style): His strong sense of purpose helps inspire commitment but can occasionally lead him to emphasize the broader mission over practical trade-offs, performance expectations, or difficult leadership decisions.
- » Safety (Under-leveraged style): Lesser focus on planning, scrutiny, and controls may cause execution risks, stakeholder concerns, or accountability gaps to receive less attention than the outcomes he is seeking to achieve.
- » Learning (Under-leveraged drive): While open to new ideas, Pavan may at times rely on experience, relationships, and existing beliefs rather than seeking disconfirming perspectives that could sharpen his thinking and leadership impact etc.

The Hogan Development Survey highlights few high-risk areas when Pavan is under stress or pressure.

- » His tendency to think broad and in abstractions, when overplayed in stressful scenarios can lead him toward novel ideas before sufficient operational grounding or stakeholder buy-in exists. The watch-out is becoming absorbed in possibilities; the redress is pairing innovation with practical execution plans, clear accountability, and early stakeholder testing.
- » While he is self driven and confident, under pressure he may over-rely on his own judgment or underestimate how others experience his leadership. The watch-out is reduced openness to feedback; the redress is actively seeking challenge, listening for dissenting views, and using feedback to recalibrate.
- » Pavan’s visible energy and colourful personality can help him engage and connect with others with openness but under pressure can lead to him prioritizing activity and relationships over the structured follow-through required for scale. The watch-out is confusing engagement with execution; the redress is reinforcing operating discipline, governance, and measurable delivery outcomes.

Appendices

Leadership Capabilities: Definitions

Competency	Definition
Driving Results	Drives towards top business performance. Pushes to meet or beat goals, and personally improves performance. At highest levels, changes what the organization or even the industry can do, creating far greater results.
Acting Strategically	Focuses on larger, longer-term issues, and creates plans and strategies. At higher levels, develops a strategy that conceptualizes and incorporates complex market issues, and provides a clear vision and direction for the future that people understand, and which enables them to move forward.
Leading Change	Aligns and drives people and organizations around change. Challenges the way things are and carries a message of change. At the highest levels, not only acts as change leader him/herself, but creates a series of change leaders to support a coordinated effort.
Leading People and Building Talent	Focuses, aligns, and empowers individuals, teams, and organizations. At the highest levels, creates aligned and empowered leaders to execute towards a common vision and purpose across the enterprise. Builds and develops high performing individuals and teams over the long term. Identifies and recruits top talent, gives feedback, and supports and enables development for all employees regardless of background. At the highest levels, creates systematic talent and development processes across an organisation.
Collaborating and Influencing	Engages with others over whom they have no authority. Creates partnerships. Compromises appropriately for results, rather than “giving in.” At the highest levels, creates enduring partnerships across barriers. This capability incorporates collaboration, influencing, and networking.

Executive Intelligence: Definitions

Dimension

Definition

Critical and Conceptual Thinking

Uses skilled judgment as a guide to thought and action in the accomplishment of tasks. Accurately identifies critical objectives, adeptly analyzes relevant information, and chooses the most effective path to achieving goals. Develops clear strategies, anticipates likely obstacles, and applies creative problem solving to achieve desired outcomes.

Interpersonal and Social Awareness

Effectively recognizes the different perspectives of participants in complex interpersonal interactions. Utilizes perceptive social awareness to achieve desired outcomes. Accurately identifies the likely consequences of their responses to situations. Demonstrates skilled judgment in selecting the "best" response.

Self-Evaluation and Adjustment (Learning Agility)

Incorporates new information to fully explore and comprehend issues. Identifies strengths and weaknesses of previously held positions. Demonstrates flexibility by correctly adjusting stance in recognition of new information. Values constructive criticism by using it to improve personal thoughts and actions. When appropriate, defends and maintains previously articulated positions.

Individual Styles: Definitions

While no single style can fully depict an individual, the relative ordering or ranking of styles is a useful way to characterize their preferences.

RESULTS

Achieving, driven, goal-oriented.
Focused on achievement and winning.

ORDER

Reliable, co-operative, rule-abiding.
Focused on stability and rules.

PURPOSE

High-minded, idealistic, compassionate.
Focused on compassion and higher purpose.

LEARNING

Open-minded, exploring, curious.
Focused on exploration and creativity.

AUTHORITY

Bold, decisive, dominant.
Focused on strength and dominance.

SAFETY

Careful, prepared, realistic.
Focused on planning and caution.

CARING

Warm, sincere, relational.
Focused on relationships and mutual trust.

ENJOYMENT

Cheerful, fun-loving, spontaneous.
Focused on fun and excitement.

Key Components of a Style Profile

The Individual Style Profile is made up of a number of sub-components that, together, result in a person's final style ordering. The main components that are used to determine the overall styles are: personal drives, strengths, and self-image. Each of these components is important in its own right and acts as a critical dimension of a person's overall style and behaviour.

The relationships among these sub-components provide further insight into a person's profile. With the idea that our lives are like an evolving journey, start by looking at the individual's drives; these will serve as both the path and destination. Personal drives guide a person in life. Next, consider what strengths the individual can rely on over the course of his or her life journey. Strengths will power change and progress. Finally, look to the individual's self-image, as this defines the roles a person will play over the course of the journey. Self-image summarises who a person is and helps a person create the best story for his or her life.

Drives	Strengths	Self-Image
Our drives indicate what we care most about and what energizes us. Personal drives represent our deeply held principles in life and our motivations. Drives are both means and ends in that they include both our goals in life, as well as the ways in which we should live in order to achieve these goals.	Strengths are distinguishing characteristics or virtues that define us at our best and that lead to our fulfillment in life. Our strengths help us to pursue our goals and follow our life principles. Research has shown that it is better to focus on utilizing our strengths than to dwell on our weaknesses.	Our self-image is an integrative and narrative representation of how we see ourselves and what defines us as people. Our self-image represents both an internal self-identity and the image we project to the world. Our self-image should reflect what we care about most and summarize our unique strengths and virtues.

Hogan HDS: Definitions

The Hogan Development Survey (HDS) describes the dark side of personality – qualities that emerge in times of increased strain and can disrupt relationships, damage reputations, and derail peoples' chances of success.

Derailer	Definition
Excitable	Concerns being overly enthusiastic about people or projects, and then becoming disappointed with them. Result: seems to lack persistence.
Skeptical	Concerns being socially insightful, but cynical and overly sensitive to criticism. Result: seems to lack trust.
Cautious	Concerns being overly worried about being criticized. Result: seems resistant to change and reluctant to take chances.
Reserved	Concerns lacking interest in or awareness of the feelings of others. Result: seems to be a poor communicator.
Leisurely	Concerns being independent, ignoring others' requests, and becoming irritable if they persist. Result: seems stubborn, procrastinating, and uncooperative.
Bold	Concerns having inflated views of one's competency and worth. Result: seems unable to admit mistakes or learn from experience.
Mischievous	Concerns being charming, risk-taking, and excitement-seeking. Result: seems to have trouble maintaining commitments and learning from experience.
Colorful	Concerns being dramatic, engaging, and attention-seeking. Result: seems preoccupied with being noticed and may lack sustained focus.
Imaginative	Concerns thinking and acting in interesting, unusual, and even eccentric ways. Result: seems creative but possibly lacking in judgement.
Diligent	Concerns being conscientious, perfectionistic, and hard to please. Result: tends to disempower staff.
Dutiful	Concerns being eager to please and reluctant to act independently. Result: tends to be pleasant and agreeable, but reluctant to support subordinates.
